Reading 1. White Sharks

The Great White Shark is the largest predatory shark, and is probably the most well-known and feared shark. The largest Great Whites can reach lengths of 6.7 meters and weigh up to 2,300Kg.

There are some similarities as well as differences between sharks and typical fish. Shark skeletons are made of cartilage. Fish skeletons are made of bones. Cartilage is the flexible, tough substance in people's ears and noses. Like other fish, sharks have gills that help them breathe. Fish get oxygen from the water using their gills. Water needs to move over the gills so the sharks can get enough oxygen.

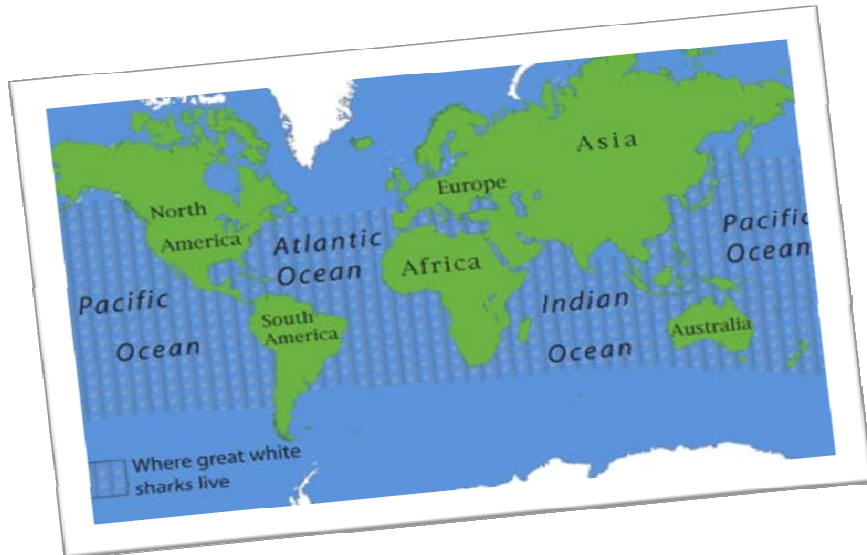

The Great White has huge teeth. When the Great White attacks, it bites its prey and shakes it to kill it. The Great White Shark often swallows many of its own teeth in an attack. Some sharks will lose 30,000 teeth in a lifetime! Great White Sharks have an excellent sense of smell: they can smell one drop of blood in a million drops of water!

The Great White Shark normally feeds on fish, seals, dolphins, turtles, and other sea animals.

Habitat: Great White Sharks are most commonly observed in the waters off the coast of South Africa, Australia, California, and Mexico. The Great White Shark is also found in the Mediterranean Sea. They generally prefer water between 12 and 23 degrees Celsius.

Reproduction: The Great White Shark is known to be ovoviparous (young develop in eggs within the mother's body). Females give birth to eight or nine puppies. Many baby sharks do not survive their first year. It is thought that Great White Sharks live up to 40 years in the wild, but this estimate may be too low.

Shark Attacks: Despite the fear of Great White Sharks, they do not attack humans as prey. Most attacks are attributed to mistakes because they can easily confuse humans for seals.
